Strategies Employed (1 January to 31 March 2021)

During the period under review, the Fund remained closely aligned with its investment philosophies and process.

Performance Review of the Target Fund (1 January to 31 March 2021)

The Fund returned approximately +0.02% (Class A) and -0.01% (Class B) in the first month of 2021. Asian equities drove the bulk of the performance for the equities allocation in the Fund. Further, gold contribution was negative while the Malaysian sukuk and money market allocations contributed a flat performance. The asset class performance was largely a reflection of value rotation and “dash for trash” chasing the fiscal stimulus, which is discussed further in the market review section of this report. Within the equity book, the top contributors were Eli Lilly, Tencent and Kingsoft Cloud. On the other hand, the largest detractors were Mastercard, Worldline and Nihon M&A.

Equity markets were relatively more mixed in February. Whilst the first half of the month was strong, growth names in particular underperformed in the latter half due to the spike in treasury yields. Consequently, the Fund returned approximately 1.86% (Class A) and 1.84% (Class B). The equity contribution was again the largest, driven by the US equities, whilst the gold and sukuk & money market allocations detracted from performance owing to the higher treasury yields. Within the equity book, the top contributors were ConocoPhillips, Antofagasta and Oz Minerals. Conversely, Keyence Corp, Teladoc and Chugai Pharma were the biggest laggards of the month.

Lastly, in March the portfolio returns were once again flattish at -0.09% (Class A) and -0.11% (Class B). The month was characterized by a receding of risk appetite as yields continued to be at high levels. The equity contribution was approximately +83bps driven largely by US equities, while the money market position contributed +4bps. However, the FX hedges and other fees proved to be a drag of approximately -86bps. Within the equity book, the top performers were Persimmon, Advance Auto Parts and Facebook. At the other end, the worst performers were Chewy, Teladoc and Kingsoft Cloud.

Review of Market (1 January to 31 March 2021)

January was a negative month of returns for global equities as it gave away most of the returns towards the month-end, low quality/low valuation outperformed high quality/high valuation factors by 2-6% points within the S&P500. This is a reversal of 2020, but a continuation of what we have seen since the election, and especially since the Georgia runoff where the victory for the Democrats makes large stimulus more likely. This gave bond yields a boost, hence the rotation in equity markets. Energy (+3.8%) was the best performing sector followed by the Healthcare sector (+1.4%) and then the REITs (+0.5%) sector as the market underwent the rotation which some dub the "dash for trash". Within this, Autos was by far the best performing subsector (+13.0%) with the Energy (+3.8%), Pharma/Biotech (+3.1%) and Semiconductors/Semi-Equipment (+2.4%) sectors a considerable way off. Conversely, Consumer Staples (-5.2%), Industrials (-4.3%) and Materials (-2.4%) were the worst performing sectors. Within the worst performers, Professional Services (-7.1%), Household/Personal Products (-6.7%) and Consumer Services (-6.6%) were the worst performing subsector groups.

In February, global equities rose, led by Developed Markets (+2.5%), outperforming Emerging Market by 1.7%. February market's performance was a story of two halves, as the key focus in the earlier part of the month were on companies financial results with the markets posting strong weekly gains. Further, the progress on vaccination and prospects of the US fiscal stimulus revived the reflation trade. The tables turned in the second half as the rally came to a halt and equities declined as treasury yields dampened investor enthusiasm towards risky assets (U.S Treasury yield rose +34bps to 1.40%). Commodities were the standout performer for the month, and the Energy and Materials sectors paved the way as short dated assets outperformed growth assets due to the rates spike. Brent oil price gained a whopping 17.5% month-on-month in February to end the month at US$64.4/bbl. It touched $67/bbl on Feb 24th, the highest level in more than a year, as the market looks ahead toward an accelerated decline in record inventories. The S&P Industrial metals index was up 11.1%. Copper climbed to a fresh ten-year high on higher expected demand driven by global economic recovery in the light of vaccine rollouts. Gold prices tumbled 6.1% (to close at $1,734/oz) amid a broader surge higher in US long-dated real yields. Conversely, Healthcare, Consumer and Tech were sector laggards.

Much of the focus for the month of March was on vaccines and the details of Biden's spending plan. Amid this backdrop, global developed equities rose once again (+3.1%), outperforming Emerging Market (which fell -1.7%) by 4.8%. Risk appetite for Emerging Market fell in contrast to Developed Market. A few factors played a key role in this namely i) US treasury yields breaching key levels (U.S Treasury yield rose +34bps to 1.74%.) ii) resurgence of virus outbreak leading to mobility restrictions in a number of countries and iii) a heightened perception on exaction risk for Emerging Market monetary and fiscal policies especially focused on President Erdogan replacing the CBRT Governor again; and iv) idiosyncratic events, such as Intel's plan on re-entering the foundry business. A theme emerging for 2021 is that 2020 winners continue to be 2021 losers. Notably, Energy (with oil prices is up 24% Year-to-Date), Utilities and Financials were the best performing sectors for the month. On the other hand, Tech Communications Services and Healthcare lagged in March.
