

Fund Commentary and Strategy

During the month, the Fund was mainly invested in the Target Fund.

Commentary from the Target Fund Manager

The war has added to existing inflationary pressures through the further impairment of supply chains. In March, there was a big bear flattening in global bond yields and markets priced in hikes by the European Central Bank ("ECB"), despite a more negative outlook for European growth. There were also continued lockdowns in China, as the leadership continues to pursue a zero-COVID policy – the citizens of Shenzhen and Shanghai both undergoing severe restrictions on movement.

Indicative-only March contributions:

Russian bonds -2.3%. NB – these bonds were marked to zero in early March – hence the negative return on the month.

Rouble: -0.5% the bond value went to zero, leaving a long position in USD and short position in RUB through hedging of the previous Rouble exposure. The Rouble appreciated due to manipulation by the central bank and capital controls, so the Target Fund Manager's short position was costly. The net position is approximately USD -68m short RUB at month end, and most of this will be gone in April. The RUB position offset a lot of the Target Fund's otherwise positive returns towards the end of the month.

Egypt: +0.3%. Positive returns from a number of EM positions, but Egypt particularly supportive.

Financials, Converts contributed -0.2% each.

The team has built positions in EU duration through call options after the huge upward movement in yields. This expresses a view that the ECB will struggle to fully deliver on the market's very hawkish expectations. Also, the team took advantage of a huge spike in US inflation expectations, creating a position through inflation swaps that has already benefited the Target Fund as inflation expectations have retraced a little.

The Russian bonds are now marked at zero. The Target Fund Manager sincerely hope that the situation in Ukraine will be resolved quickly and the Target Fund Manager will see a return to liquidity for these bonds. If this occurs, the potential upside for the clients from this position alone is significant. In the meantime, the Target Fund Manager's energies are focused on generating attractive returns elsewhere.
