

Nomura Global Dynamic Bond Fund - Class MYR

February 2025

Fund Commentary and Strategy

During the month, the Fund was mainly invested in the Target Fund.

Commentary from the Target Fund Manager

In February, Class MYR returned +1.42%. The threat of tariffs and US government spending cuts fuelled fears of a growth shock that weighed on US risk markets, whilst increased anticipation of a resolution to the war in Ukraine and greater European military spending buoyed defence companies in particular. Weaker consumer data in the US pushed US Treasury yields lower. Credit markets held up well.

The Fund's main risk positions performed very well in this environment; Subordinated Financials were very strong, and Emerging Market positions, notably Romania and Mexico, which are both 4% allocations in the Fund. The duration of the Fund was increased a little through conditional (option-based) US 10 year exposure that performed well as yields fell in the second half of the month. Risk hedging was a slight drag on otherwise very strong performance.

The broad strategy of the Fund remained unchanged, but we did add to duration prior to the mid-month rally in bond yields, which proved positive for the Fund.

Disclaimer:

Based on the Fund's portfolio returns as at 31 January 2025, the Volatility Factor (VF) for the Fund is 7.61 and is classified as "Low" (Source: Refinitiv Lipper). "Low" includes funds with VF that are between 4.85 and 9.085. The VF means there is a possibility for the Fund in generating an upside return or downside return around this VF. The Volatility Class (VC) is assigned by Refinitiv Lipper based on quintile ranks of VF for qualified funds. VF is subject to monthly revision and VC will be revised every six months. The Fund's portfolio may have changed since this date and there is no guarantee that the Fund will continue to have the same VF or VC in the future. Presently, only funds launched in the market for at least 36 months will display the VF and its VC.
