

Nomura Global Dynamic Bond Fund - Class MYR

August 2026

Fund Commentary and Strategy

During the month, the Fund was mainly invested in the Target Fund.

Commentary from the Target Fund Manager

Class MYR returned -1.34% in August. The move higher in long end bond yields was the main development in August with US 30-year yields hitting 5.31% mid-month which is the highest since 2007 and it was a similar story in Europe with 30-year bunds climbing to 3.81% by the end of the month which is their highest since 2011. US yields retraced some of the move into month-end as Treasury Secretary Bessent announced their intent to at least double their buy back operations of long dated Treasuries.

Oil prices were broadly flat over the month although there was optimism early in the month that talks could see a resolution helping oil prices fall, the talks failed to materialise which pushed oil up again. By the end of the month, the US and Iran were trading fresh strikes helping keep oil prices up. This also helped raise rates given the knock on impact of energy prices for inflation.

Financials provided the bulk of the positive return to the fund in August, generating 25bps, of which 15bps came from our AT1 holdings. Although sovereign yields were up in the month, financials proved resilient with spreads 2 bps tighter for US IG Fins and 9bps tighter for Global CoCos.

Overall returns to our EM positions were roughly flat over the month with a positive contribution from Egypt external and South Africa local positions offset by Bulgaria and Romania external positions, largely due to their exposure to European rates. Credit hedges via CDS Index detracted 16bps, spreads tightened over the month as resilient data and strong earnings were supportive for corporates.
